Supportive Families

When someone comes out...when you are thinking of coming out....there are many ways that impacts others in your family.

The LGBTQ Center recognizes that there are many different family structures and family is not limited to biological or legal definitions. We have provided here some helpful resources that address families of all sorts – whether you are born into them or you have chosen them.

Local Resources

Raleigh Allies [1]

Hosted by LGBT Center of Raleigh

Raleigh Allies is a resource for our friends and family (and those of LGBT individuals) to help better educate and foster dialogue that helps to further educate others. More so, we hope to be an entry point for people who may not necessarily consider themselves a part of the LGBT community and help encourage a transition from passive support to active engagement in furthering the cause of Equality. The program is not just limited to heterosexual individuals however, and anyone who considers themselves an ally to a sexual or gender minority are welcome!

Significant Others, Friends, Family, and Allies (SOFFA) [2]

Hosted by LGBT Center of Raleigh

SoFFA is an off shoot of the LGBT Center of Raleigh’s Transgender Initiative to create a peer support and social network for significant others, friends, family, and allies of people in transition or questioning whether transition is appropriate, as well as gender fluid or gender queer individuals. We extend our communal safe space to address the special needs, concerns, and questions those with gender non-conforming loved ones face.
Triangle PFLAG [3]

Meets twice monthly, in Durham and Raleigh.

If you are a parent or friend struggling to understand and accept a lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender* or queer loved one, we can help. If you are an LGBTQ individual seeking an affirming community within which to explore and grow, PFLAG Triangle is here to support you. If you are a friend or ally seeking to advocate on behalf of equal rights, we welcome you.

Whatever your position or wherever you are in your stage of discovery, PFLAG Triangle is here to support you in your journey.
